APPENDIX II

An Ironic Venue for Separation of Church and State Litigation

Henri Castro, a man of Jewish descent whose family converted to Catholicism, was instrumental in the emigration of Alsatians from Europe to the United States.¹

Alsace, a small geographic region with its own unique language and religious diversity,² was long fought over by Germany and France.³ There being no independent constitutional judicial system to protect the rights of the Alsatian minority from the imposition of German or French

Diversity of Homo Sapien Religious and Life After Death Beliefs

Eternity is a Long Time

Though most of the seven billion *Homo sapiens*⁶ have no knowledge they are traveling 66,000 miles per hour around the sun,⁷ they have evolved over several million years to be the only species which knows it will die.

Not wanting their existence to end, Homo sapiens developed a multitude of theories and hopes, encompassed in thousands of religions,⁸ of how they can avoid simply returning to the Earth from whence they and other species came. Or, as the country western song says: "Everybody wanna go to heaven, but nobody wanna go now."⁹ In the past 10,000 years of human societal development, those belief systems have included the multiple gods of the ancient Romans, Greeks and Egyptians, the monotheism of the Abrahamic religions of Judaism, Christianity and Islam, the reincarnation beliefs of Buddhism, and the various religious beliefs and practices of the Shintoists, Hindus, Maya, Aztecs and Incas, to name but a few.

Some monopolistically believe theirs is the one and only true religion and path to eternal life. On the other hand, some Homo sapiens, known as Atheists, believe they know the only truth: That there is nothingness after physical death.¹⁰ Still others postulate a parallel universe.¹¹ And those called Agnostics do not claim to know what happens after the final breath is expelled.¹²

Grace and Torture

While religious institutions bestow many blessings and try to alleviate suffering, those acts of Grace are newtralized by religious Homo sapiens who exhibit an historical and continuing pernicious and pervasive tendency to kill other humans and confiscate the property of those, sometimes even within the same religion, who do not believe as they do. Christians slaughtered other Christians.¹³ In Europe, the blood of Irish Protestants and Catholics flowed freely.¹⁴ Similar

The American Colonial Religious Experience

The Alsatians who immigrated to the Medina Valley were neither the first nor the last group to come to America in search of freedom from government controlled religion. Before them came the Pilgrims persecuted by the government-controlled Church of England,²⁴ the French Protestant Huguenots persecuted by the French Catholic government of Louis XIV,²⁵ and the European Jews persecuted by European Christian governments.²⁶

They voted with their feet for separation of church and state by coming to the new world. But old practices die hard, and the American colonists themselves established official government religions.²⁷ For instance, the Rhode Island Charter of 1663 promised to “preserve unto [its inhabitants] that liberty in the true Christian faith and worship of God.”²⁸ Other Rhode Island laws restricted admission to the colony to those professing the Christian religion.²⁹ Similar laws existed in Massachusetts³⁰ and New York.³¹ In Virginia in 1776, although it was declared “all men are equally entitled to the free exercise of religion, according to the dictates of conscience,” it was also declared that “it is the mutual duty of all to practice Christian forbearance, love, and charity towards each other.”³² In Maryland, which was originally settled as a safe haven for Catholics, a Protestant majority became dominant and persecuted and marginalized Catholic residents.³³ Seventh-Day Adventists were similarly persecuted by the majority for their beliefs.³⁴

Recognizing the danger of the integration of church and state, Reverend Isaac Backus wrote in 1773:

[W]here [church and state] and the weapons which belong to them are well distinguished and improved according to the true nature and end of their institutions, the effects are happy, and they do not at all interfere with each other. But where they have been confounded together no tongue nor pen can fully describe the mischiefs that have ensued of which the Holy Ghost gave early and plain warnings.³⁵

Government and Religion Joining Hands

One picture from the modern era speaks silently and poignantly of the danger of majoritarian government and religion joining hands:³⁶

If government-run public schools also joined hands with religion and had the power to impose religious views, questions arise: Which holy books and prayers would be preferred? The Torah? The Book of Mormon? The Catholic Bible? The New Testament? The Bible as edited by Thomas Jefferson?³⁷ The Koran? Would Christians be required to face Mecca or observe Hebrew prayer? Would Jews and Muslims be obligated to stand and recite the Lord's Prayer?

One need only look at the states of Israel and Iran to see the conflicts which arise when government and religion become closely intertwined.³⁸

The Debate Continues Through American History

“Leave the matter of religion to the family altar, the church, and the private school, supported entirely by private contribution. Keep the church and state forever separate.”

-President Ulysses S. Grant³⁹

“80 percent of the American people want Bible readings and prayer in the schools . . . Why should the majority be so severely penalized by the protests of a handful?”

-Reverend Billy Graham⁴⁰

“Those who would renegotiate the boundaries between church and state must therefore answer a difficult question: Why would we trade a system that has served us so well for one that has served others so poorly?”

-Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor⁴¹

“God and the ten commandments and school prayer have all been expelled from the public schools. Pass a constitutional amendment to allow voluntary prayer.”

-Presidential Candidate Pat Buchanan⁴²

“I’m a Catholic and I hope a devout one, but I think that the public school classroom is no place for me to try and impose my world formula for prayer on children who don’t share it, and for that very reason, I don’t want my children in a public school classroom to be exposed to someone else’s religion or formula.”

The United States Has No King: The People Are Sovereign

The Constitution invokes, and is based upon, the people as having ultimate sovereignty and power over the three branches of government through the electoral and amendment processes vested in them. That power, for example, has been exercised to allow women to vote, to prohibit, and then allow, liquor and to limit the President of the United States to two terms.⁴⁷

The people could exercise that same power to amend the Constitution to favor a particular religion, to turn the United States into a religious state such as Israel or Iran or to suppress religion as in the Soviet Union,⁴⁸ China⁴⁹ or Cambodia under the Khmer Rouge.⁵⁰

Thus far, that power has not been exercised in such a manner, and this Court's obligation is to follow the Constitution as written, as intended by the Framers and as interpreted by the Supreme Court of the United States.

Original Intent of the Framers of the United States Constitution

Reasonable minds differ on the Constitution as a living, evolving document or one to be interpreted strictly as the Framers originally intended.⁵¹ Some issues not foreseen by the leaders of an agrarian slave holding nation do not lend themselves to providing insight into the intent of those authors.

Religion though and its relationship to government was one on which the Founders did speak clearly. Having witnessed and learned from the bloodshed and persecution of European church-state partnerships the Founders wrote:

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.⁵²

Known as the Father of the Constitution, James Madison expressed his intent this way:

Whilst we assert for ourselves a freedom to embrace, to profess, and to observe the religion which we believe to be of divine origin, we cannot deny an equal freedom to those whose minds have not yet yielded to the evidence which has convinced us. If this freedom be abused, it is an offense against God, not against man.⁵³

In an 1802 letter to members of the Danbury Baptist Association, Thomas Jefferson wrote:

Believing with you that religion is a matter which lies solely between man and his God, that he owes account to none other for his faith or his worship, that the legitimate powers of government reach actions only, and not opinions, I contemplate with sovereign reverence that act of the whole American people which declared that their legislature should “make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof,” thus building a wall of separation between Church and State. Adhering to this expression of the supreme will of the nation in behalf of the rights of conscience, I shall see with sincere satisfaction the progress of those sentiments which tend to restore to man all his natural rights, convinced he has no natural right in opposition to his social duties.⁵⁴

Mr. Jefferson reaffirmed his intent in an 1822 letter: “And a strong proof of the solidity of the primitive faith, is its restoration, as soon as a nation arises which vindicates to itself the freedom of religious opinion, and its external divorce from the civil authority.”⁵⁵

Similarly, in 1817, John Adams wrote to Thomas Jefferson, warning of the dangers of state religion:

Oh! Lord! Do you think a Protestant Popedom is annihilated in America? Do you recollect, or have you ever attended to the ecclesiastical strifes in Maryland Pennsylvania, New York, and every part of New England? What a mercy it is that these People cannot whip and crop, and pillory and roast, as yet in the U.S.! If they could they would. . . . Quakers, Anabaptists, Moravians, Swedenborgians, Methodists, Unitarians, Nothingarians in all Europe are employing underhand means to propagate their sectarian Systems in these States.

The multitude and diversity of them, you will say, is our security against them all. God grant it. But if we consider that the Presbyterians and Methodists are far more numerous and the most likely to unite; let a George Whitefield arise, with a military cast, like Mahomet, or Loyola, and what will become of all the other Sects who can never unite?⁵⁶

Benjamin Franklin also expressed a desire for separation of church and state, writing in 1780:

When a Religion is good, I conceive that it will support itself; and, when it cannot support itself, and God does not take care to support, so that its Professors are oblig'd to call for the help of the Civil Power, it is a sign, I apprehend, of its being a bad one. But I shall be out of my Depth, if I wade any deeper in Theology.⁵⁷

Thomas Paine likewise called for this separation, explaining "To God, and not to man, are all men accountable on the score of religion."⁵⁸ To Paine, "[p]ersecution is not an original feature in any religion; but it is always the strongly-marked feature of all law-religions, or religions established by law."⁵⁹

The Framers' own religious beliefs were quite diverse. According to Arthur Schlesinger, Jr.:

George Washington was a nominal Anglican who rarely stayed for Communion. John Adams was a Unitarian, which Trinitarians abhorred as heresy. Thomas Jefferson, denounced as an [A]theist, was actually a [D]eist who detested organized religion and who produced an expurgated version of the New Testament with the miracles eliminated. Jefferson and James Madison, a nominal Episcopalian, were the architects of the Virginia Statute of Religious Freedom. James Monroe was another Virginia Episcopalian. John Quincy Adams was another Massachusetts Unitarian.⁶⁰

American Legal History

The United States Supreme Court recently surveyed significant historical events relevant to the development of First Amendment jurisprudence in our country, noting that “[c]ontroversy between church and state . . . is hardly new.”⁶¹ Indeed, legal controversy concerning the promotion and support of a particular religious viewpoint in public schools dates back to as early as 1890, when the Wisconsin Supreme Court grappled with the issue of whether public school teachers should be permitted to read to students from the Bible as a textbook. State ex rel. Weiss v. Dist. Bd., 44 N.W. 967 (1890). In concluding that such reading of the Bible was prohibited, the court wrote:

The priceless truths of the Bible are best taught to our youth in the church, the Sabbath and parochial schools, the social religious meetings, and, above all, by parents in the home circle. There, these truths may be explained and enforced, the spiritual welfare of the child guarded and protected, and his spiritual nature directed and cultivated, in accordance with the dictates of the parental conscience. The constitution does not interfere with such teaching and culture. It only banishes theological polemics from the district schools. It does this, not because of any hostility to religion, but because the people who adopted it believed that the public good would thereby be promoted, and they so declared in the preamble. Religion teaches obedience to law, and flourishes best where good government prevails. The constitutional prohibition was adopted in the interests of good government; and it argues but little faith in the vitality and power of religion to predict disaster to its progress because a constitutional provision, enacted for such a purpose, is faithfully executed.

Though the court’s holding in Weiss was based on the Wisconsin state constitution, the underlying principles espoused in that early decision remained relevant in later federal cases challenging religious practices in public schools. The early 1960’s brought two landmark

Ct. 694, 702-704 (2012) (describing religious controversy pertaining to the Magna Carta, the English monarchy, the escape of Puritans to New England, religious establishment in the colonies, and the drafting of the First Amendment).

Establishment Clause decisions by the Supreme Court of the United States. First, in 1962, the Court held a public school district's practice of daily classroom invocation of God's blessings as prescribed in a prayer promulgated by its Board of Regents was an impermissible use of the public school system inconsistent with the Establishment Clause. Engel v. Vitale, 370 U.S. 421, 424-425 (1962). Then, in 1963, when parents like Madalyn Murray O'Hair⁶² objected to a public school's practice of requiring Bible reading at the opening of the school day and recitation of the Lord's Prayer by the students in unison, the Court held such practices violated the Establishment Clause. Sch. Dist. of Abington Twp., Pa. v. Schempp, 374 U.S. 203, 223 (1963).

In the half century that has passed since these important decisions, the Supreme Court of the United States and the Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit have attempted to more clearly define the contours of the Establishment Clause as it relates to prayer in public schools, and more specifically, as it relates to prayer at graduation. In Lee v. Weisman, 505 U.S. 577, 587, (1992), the Court granted permanent injunctive relief to prevent the inclusion of clergy-led invocations in the form of prayer in graduation ceremonies of city public schools. That same year, the Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit held student-led prayer that was approved by a vote of the students and was non-sectarian and non-proselytizing was permissible at high school graduation ceremonies. Jones v. Clear Creek Indep. Sch. Dist., 977 F.2d 963, 969 (5th Cir. 1992). Other Fifth Circuit cases relied on Jones for similar holdings. See Ingebretsen on Behalf of Ingebretsen v. Jackson Pub. Sch. Dist., 88 F.3d 274 (5th Cir. 1996). However, in Santa Fe Independent School District v. Doe, 530 U.S. 290, 310-12 (2000), the Supreme Court granted injunctive relief to prevent the inclusion of ⁶² Madalyn Murray O'Hair was the leader of the American Atheist movement. JAMES S. OLSON, HISTORICAL DICTIONARY OF THE 1960S 349 (Greenwood Publishing 1999). She opposed the practice of mandatory prayers in public schools, and in the 1962 case of Engel v. Vitale, "the Supreme Court essentially agreed with O'H[air]'s position." Id. The "decision . . . made Madalyn Murray [O'Hair], in the words of one journalist, '[t]he most hated woman in America.'" Id. See also BRYAN F. student-led prayer invocations before football games at Texas public schools. Sante Fe has been interpreted as implicitly overruling the Fifth Circuit's Jones decision to the extent that it approves a majoritarian election on prayer. See Does 1-7 v. Round Rock Indep. Sch. Dist., 540 F. Supp. 2d 735, 747-50 (W.D. Tex. 2007) (Sparks, J).

Courts outside of the Fifth Circuit have provided further guidance. See ACLU of N.J. v. Black Horse Pike Reg'l Bd. of Educ., 84 F.3d 1471, 1488 (3d Cir. 1996) (en banc) (invalidating school policy under which prayers could be given at graduations if approved by student vote); Cole v. Oroville Union High Sch. Dist., 228 F.3d 1092, 1101-03 (9th Cir. 2000) (ruling that sectarian and proselytizing valedictory speech at graduation would violate the Establishment Clause); Lassonde v. Pleasanton Unified Sch. Dist., 320 F.3d 979, 983-85 (9th Cir. 2003) (ruling that school could not constitutionally allow student who was selected as graduation speaker based on his academic standing to give proselytizing religious speech at graduation); Deveney v. Bd. of Educ. of Cnty. of Kanawha, 231 F. Supp. 2d 483, 485-88 (S.D. W.VA. 2002) (issuing TRO against offering of prayer by student at graduation pursuant to vote of student class officers); Skarin v. Woodbine Cmty. Sch., 204 F. Supp. 2d 1195, 1198 (S.D. Iowa 2002) (issuing injunction prohibiting school choir from singing Lord's Prayer at graduation ceremony); Appenheimer v. Sch. Bd., No. 01-1226, 2001 WL 1885834, at *6-9 (C.D. Ill. May 24, 2001) (issuing TRO against offering of prayer by student at graduation pursuant to vote of senior class student board).
